

CONTRIBUTORS

Dillon Bustin is an occasional student in the Indiana University Folklore Department. His second documentary film, Water From Another Time, will be released in September, 1982. His study of culture change in Brown County, Indiana, If You Don't Outdie Me, will be published by I.U. Press in October, 1982.

Bill (William) Ellis wrote his Ph.D. thesis on sentimental ballads at Ohio State University in 1978. His areas of interest are Midwest folklore and the lore of adolescents.

Timothy Evans is currently an intern at the Blue Ridge Institute, Ferrum, VA. He is enrolled in the folklore program at Indiana University.

Annette Fromm is a graduate student in the folklore program at Indiana University.

Joseph P. Goodwin is a Ph.D. candidate in the folklore program at Indiana University.

Bruce Harrah-Conforth is a graduate student in the folklore program at Indiana University.

Elli Köngäs-Maranda is a professor of folklore at Laval University, Ottawa, Canada.

Warren E. Roberts is Professor of Folklore and Associate Chairman of the Folklore Institute at Indiana University.

Pamela L. Royston is a Ph.D. candidate in the English Department at Duke University, North Carolina.

Paul Tyler is a graduate student in the folklore program at Indiana University.

Peter Voorheis recently received his Ph.D. from the folklore program at Indiana University.

John Welford is a graduate student in the folklore program at Indiana University.